

Lena Keul – Topic Education – Workshop description

Leaving the old paths of economic education

We dare a look into the future: How do we want university education to look like in the year 2040? How will education methodically be structured and which topics will be taught in economic education? We will also have a look at which type of economists we need in the future and what skills they should have. How would we like to educate them?

With diverse methods as ‘paper stop dance’ and ‘future conference’ we will approach these complex questions in easy and entertaining ways and develop our own concept for economic education.
